Le Baron B. Prince, Statesman, Is Dead

Ex-Governor of New Mexico Failed to Rally After Serious Operation.

Le Baron Bradford Prince, aged 82, lawyer, author and statesman, who was closely identified with the old Territory was Governor, died yesterday in Flushing Hospital. He became ill Thursday and was taken to the hospital for an operation. He lived in the old Prince homestead at Flushing.

Mr. Prince was born in Flushing, son of William R. Prince and Charlotte Collins Prince. His mother was a descendant of Gov. William Bradford of Plymouth colony, who came to America on the Mayflower. He was graduated from Columbia Universetty in 1866, and took an active interest in politics. He was elected to the New York State Assembly in 1871, and two years later to the State Senate. While in the Assembly he was chairman of the Judiciary Committee that had charge of the impeachment of the Tweed Judges. In 1868 and in 1876 he was a member of the New York delegation to the Republican National Convention.

National Convention.

Because of his activities regarding the Tweed Judges Mr. Prince became involved in one of the political fights of that period. President Hayes nominated him for Navai Officer of New York, but the nomination failed of contirmation because of the bitter opposition of the Tweed faction. In February, 1879, howevek, at the suggestion of William M. Evarts, Mr. Prince was appointed Chief, J. T. Brodhead, Annie K. Justice of New Mexico, He went out to the Territory to grow up with it. The Territory became a full fledged State in 1912. ritory until 1882. In 1889 he was ap-pointed Governor, and held that position until 1893.

His first marriage was in 1879, to Miss I Hattie Childs of this city. She died a year later. His second wife was Miss Mary Catherine Beardsley of Oswego, N. Y., whom he married in 1881.

He leaves his wife, a son by his first marriage, William Bradford Prince, and a sister. Mrs. Charlotte Henry.
